Recruitment for the educational project In Between? Searching for local histories in European borderlands

European Network Remembrance and Solidarity began to recruit participants for an educational project of study visits called “In Between? Searching for local histories in European borderlands”.

Project description

The initiative targets young people aged 18-25 and aims to improve the knowledge young Europeans have on the historical processes in 20th-century Europe, equipping those interested in history with tools and methods for examining and documenting the past as well as documenting oral reports and audio-visual materials concerning history and the identities of Europe's border communities.

The participants selected in the recruitment process are going to take part in workshops delivered in Warsaw by experts in most recent history, oral history, anthropology and archival studies who will train the participants in basic methods of collecting reports and photograph digitization. After the workshops, the participants (in teams of six) are going to go on week-long study visits to border places in four regions of East-Central Europe (Bukovina, Lubuskie Region, Banská Bystrica Region and Transylvania). The visits will result in collecting interviews and audio-visuals documents which reflect the past of a given region; the project participants will also attempt to make the personal, local historical narratives that they have collected a part of a broader context of Europe's regional history. The project will close with a conference to be held in Warsaw in late 2016.

Recruitment

The recruitment process will young people aged 18-25 interested in:

- history and art history,
- social sciences,
- cultural anthropology
- and visual arts.

European Network Remembrance and Solidarity (ENRS) is an international initiative which focuses on researching, documenting and disseminating knowledge about Europe's 20th-century history and ways it is commemorated with a special focus on periods of dictatorships, wars, and social opposition towards captivity. The Network's current members are Germany, Poland, Slovakia, Hungary and Romania, while Austria, the Czech Republic and Albania have the status of an observer. www.enrs.eu

The ENRS's main tasks include:

- supporting the development of European culture of remembrance and reinforcing solidarity between European societies through dialogue and comprehensive analysis of common 20th-century history;
- establishing a network of institutions and organisations to facilitate exchange and discussion concerning various images and interpretations of history;
- building a space for common understanding thanks to which future generations would be able to use the experiences of 20th-century history;
- analysing ways in which historical events and processes are commemorated across the globe.
